About

Thomas Biggs

Tom Biggs grew up in Peoria, Illinois, and attended the University of Michigan, where he earned a B.S. in Geology and Geophysics. His 35+ years as an oil and gas exploration executive afforded him the opportunity to travel worldwide and experience firsthand both modern and classical art.

During the past eleven years of “semi-retirement” Tom has enjoyed cattle ranching in Southern Oklahoma, while devoting his free time to studying and creating art. Recently selling their ranch, Tom and his wife, Dortha, now enjoy their newly-built home in Medicine Park, where Tom devotes his full time efforts to his love of painting.

In the past, Tom has worked in acrylic, oil, charcoal, and pen and ink, and has had his work exhibited in art shows in Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico. His current passion is for watercolor, and he has work on exhibit in three galleries in Oklahoma - as well as in the Kemp’s “Local Color” gift shop.

Tom has studied under such nationally noted artists, including the late Wichita Falls native Steve Grey. Most recently Tom completed a 5-day workshop on “Painting the Human Figure” led by worldwide authority Don Andrews.
